Global Media Education

Scholars:
- PhD. Agnaldo Arroio – USP School of Education;
- PhD. Renato de Oliveira Moraes - Polytechnic School.

Guest Scholars: Various from Lapland University (Finland), The Education University of Hong Kong, Loughborough University and others to be confirmed.

Teaching Mode
- Face-to-face teaching on campus
- Online

Number of Places Available: 30

School/City: USP School of Education / São Paulo City;

Starting date: February 17;
Ending date: February 27;

Class Schedule: soon;

Course Summary

Global Media Education (GME) emphasizes the need for a new social contract for education to repair injustices, while transforming the future. This course introduces students to current research topics in media education, especially the importance of AI literacy, disinformation and global perspectives. Also, the course aims to foster intercultural dialogue, introduce to AI literacy, promote critical thinking and foster collaborative work.

Course Content:
- The new model of Intercultural online pedagogy;
- Intercultural Communication in the Digital Age;
- Introduction to Fact-checking as a new civic skill;
- The digital divide in global education;
- Artificial Intelligence literacy; international research topics in media education;
- Critical Media Literacy for social and environmental justices;
- Disinformation in health and science;
- Media Literacy experiences in different cultures.